2019 BIENNIAL CONFERENCE

Vancouver, BC

June 16th to 18th, 2019

Preliminary Program

“Discovering Scholarship and Research in Academia”

Hosted by:

UBC DENTISTRY

THE
UNIVERSITY OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

The oral health problems facing our nation extend beyond primary disease or developmental pathologies, but are complex and multi-factorial including genetic, social, cultural, behavioral and environmental factors. In order to effectively define and manage oral health problems and challenges, their multi-factorial nature needs to be addressed through rigorous and reproducible research. The objective of the Association of Canadian Faculties of Dentistry 2019 biennial meeting is to focus on the role of Canadian's ten dental school in addressing these oral health needs through the continuum of oral health research and scholarly activity spanning basic science, translational and clinical research, faculty career development and student training.

The era of individual or "ivory tower"-based science programs has passed and highly effective research involves teams of clinicians and scientists through multi- and inter-disciplinary collaborations. Addressing the oral health and oral health care needs of the nation will require interdisciplinary teams: a uniquely trained group of scientists who not only have a firm understanding of the multi-factorial components of the complex oral, dental and craniofacial diseases, but who can also be effective leaders or members of interdisciplinary teams.

The goal of today's event is to begin a dialogue to foster increased research and scholarship collaborations across the ten Canadian Faculties of Dentistry that will impact oral health while developing a new cadre of students who can serve as research leaders in academic dentistry to address the nation's health care needs in dental, oral and craniofacial research.

"Ensure that a strong and diverse research workforce is dedicated to improving dental, oral, and craniofacial health".
